

Diary of our Day at Bridlington.

This is the part of the day when we were on the harbour wall. This is me and Matt looking at the boat coming into the harbour. We couldn't see both of the beaches because there was an enormous sea fret. A sea fret happens because a parcel of warm air goes across the cold North Sea and they mix to make a sea fret.

By Josh